Answer the questions 39-41 according to the text below.

Today, more than ever, health experts focus on sugar consumption in our diet. They acknowledge that sugar provides a quick source of energy and it can be enjoyed in small amounts without causing harm. However, they also highlight the fact that consuming too much sugar, especially with fizzy drinks and junk food, can cause serious health problems such as heart disease, tooth decay and obesity. Even though it is not possible to completely avoid sugar, health experts argue that we can minimize its consumption by making healthier food choices. Reducing the amount of sugar in our daily diets can help us protect our health and lower the risk of developing long-term health issues.

40. What are health experts' thoughts on consuming too much sugar?

- A) It minimizes the danger of suffering from chronic diseases.
- B) It can protect you from dental problems.
- C) It can lead to gaining too much weight.
- D) It has more benefits than harm.
- E) It may help you stop consuming fizzy drinks.

Answer the questions 42-44 according to the text below.

Contrary to common belief, anger is not always a bad emotion. It is indeed very normal and sometimes, it can even help us realize that we have a problem we need to solve. Despite this, anger creates a burden in people's social lives.

There are three ways in which people deal with anger: "anger-out", "anger-in" and "controlled expression". The first two approaches are not good ways to tackle this problem, because they do not make your anger go away or help you overcome it. With "anger-out", people express their anger in strong ways such as yelling or saying bad things. With "anger-in", people go silent and they do not express their feelings. Since these behaviours lead to unhealthy communication, it is advised that you use "controlled expression" to manage your anger and deal with your problems in a more effective way. Successful anger management can help us transform a bad emotion into a healing experience.

42. What is the best title for the text?

- A) How to Describe an Emotion
- B) How to Get Angry
- C) The Importance of Effective Communication
- D) Ways to Deal with Anger
- E) Why People Get Angry

43. According to the text, which of the following is FALSE?

- A) There are more than one approach to cope with anger.
- B) It is generally believed that anger is not a good emotion.
- C) Anger always has negative effects on people.
- D) The way you express your anger is important.
- E) Controlling your anger helps you solve your problems.

44. When someone adopts the "anger-out" approach, s/he - - - .
